

Magnificent March

Home is where the work is, by Purnima Coontoor in the March 2009 issue of Life Positive is a well-written article. "What are you doing nowadays?" is the constant question thrown at me wherever I go. I am a retired person. I do not know what answer they expect from me! The rest of the issue was also wonderful. Silently I went through all the articles sitting in my balcony after a long time. Being so disturbed for so long, I never even bothered to go through the issues, though I am a life member of Life Positive! Even the cover was so beautiful and pleasing to the eyes. As I proceeded, I felt each article was so inviting, that I could not put it down. I went through the whole issue at one go (reading a few articles more than once). I felt so peaceful after a long time as I sat there silently for a long time watching the tree outside my balcony, with bright orange flowers, and the birds feeding themselves from the flowers. I felt a transformation going inside me! Thanks so much.

JAYA, DELHI

The March 2009 issue is amazing, just the right thing for these times. Peter Russel's The omega point completely resonated with my thought process.

The article on The new economy has inspired me to change my counselling practice. I have now decided to let the clients determine the price of my services. In fact, I put it into practice this morning and am feeling great about this. As the Father of the Nation said, "Be the change..."

CHITRA JHA, LADAKH

Tears of joy welled up in my eyes when I read Dada Vaswani's vision for the new world order in the March 2009 anniversary issue of Life Positive. How lofty his views, how sublime his intentions! Even if only the readers of Life Positive and followers of Dada Vaswani internalise and follow his advice, we may well reach the critical mass needed to elevate the consciousness of the entire world by 2012!

PURNIMA COOFTOOR, BANGALORE

Your refreshing interview with Dada Vaswani, A World of peace, joy and harmony, in the March 2009 issue of Life Positive made for nostalgic reading. I felt Dada's words have seeds for world making that emerge spontaneously from the heart, which is full of the love of God. He is like a lighthouse in this dark hour of doubt and despair. His simple language, profound thoughts, universal outlook, captivating voice, all garnished with delightful anecdotes and instances from the lives of the saints find a home in every heart because they are backed by the witness of his life.

VINOD C. DIXIT, AHMEDABAD

The grace of giving

The article, The power of giving, by Chitra Jha in the February 2009 issue of Life Positive instantly evokes a soul-searching thought as to who is the 'giver' any way? Can we produce even a blade of grass? Only the purified soul would be recognised by the true giver.

M MURALIKRISHNA, PUNE